

Dear Friend,

We haven't met you, but we think about you all the time.

We don't know what horror chased you from your home, or what dangers you have survived in search for safety. There are no words that could ever do justice to your journey. We ache for your loss. And we are so glad you made it out.

We are sending you this letter across the miles that separate us to let you know that we stand with you. We see you. We care.

Whenever you feel discouraged, please know that in San Francisco, California, there is a whole company full of your fellow humans who are thinking of you and cheering for you - 75 men and women holding you in our hearts.

At our company, Tea Collection, we work hard to show kids that we are all connected, that what happens to one of us happens to all of us.

What has happened to you matters to us. We are raising money to donate to the Global Fund for Children to help with their efforts to aid refugees, and we will do whatever we can to support you.

You are not alone. Don't lose heart. Don't give up hope. We believe in you.
